In a world where life is being lived faster and faster everyday with more stress every time, most people forget that they have to drink water and eat several snacks per day, and the Rush Water Bottle is specifically designed to avoid this from happening. The water bottle marks, by the hour, the intake you should consume from 7 am to 7 pm in order to act as a goal and reminder, and also provides two compartments for snacks. That way you can quickly fill your bottle, tuck in some snacks, and be ready to go. We believe that our bottle's practicality sets it apart from others in the market, since instead of marking how much you drink, it helps you get organized and marks when you should drink it. Other bottles have also included partitions, but these are small and designed for credit cards, money, and other small objects, not to fulfill nutritional needs.

Since 2007, we have been struggling to find the perfect bottle to satisfy the needs of a person who leads a hectic life. After several trials and prototypes, our attempts proved to not be fruitless. We are sure that our hard work has finally led to finding the ideal bottle that will conform to the necessities of a person who lives their life in a constant rush.

Our team of specialists include Laura Virginia Pernas, graduate from Cornell University with a Ph.D. degree in Human Nutrition, Fernando Bertran, graduate from the Georgia Institute of Technology with a degree in Chemistry, and Laura Losada, graduate from Berkeley college with a degree in Industrial Engineering.
